

GT40

FORD'S ICONIC SUPERCAR

During the 1960s Ford decided to take on Ferrari at its own game and developed a GT race car designed to secure victory at the prestigious Le Mans 24-Hour Endurance Race. The result of this project was the Ford GT40, a car that became a legend in its own lifetime. Since then its story has been discussed and documented to the last detail.

Photographer/author Trevor Legate has closely followed the development of the GT40 since its launch in the 1960s and photographed it competing at such classic motoring races as the BOAC500. After researching and writing a successful book about the GT40 in the 1990s, he returns to his favourite topic with this new publication which documents a number of significant examples as they are today, along with their fascinating histories. This new work offers a fresh insight into these timeless race cars.
